Protecting and restoring the integrity of ecosystems and their capacity to deliver a wide range of essential services, thus putting Europe's biodiversity on a path to recovery by 2030, as required by the EU biodiversity strategy, is fundamental to achieving the European Green Deal objectives. Avoiding loss of biodiversity also has the potential of helping to avoid threats to human health in the future. R&I will address the multiple challenges in this area, including by enabling transformative changes.

People´s health care needs are different, depending on their age, stage of life and socio-economic background. Their physical and mental health and well-being can be influenced by their individual situation as well as the broader societal context they are living in. Furthermore, health education and behaviour are important factors. Currently, more than 790 000 deaths per year in Europe are due to risk factors such as smoking, drinking, physical inactivity, and obesity.

Although the EU is a global leader in research and innovation, its performance has stagnated since 2012, and major players, from Asia in particular, are catching up and gradually occupy a more prominent position on the global R&I and technological landscape. While R&I is the engine of long-term productivity growth, Europe continues to lag behind in turning the outcomes of its excellent research into disruptive innovation. There is a growing disparity between countries and regions in terms of R&I performance, which calls for fully mobilising research, innovation and technological capacities in less developed regions.
